Clustering Findings

We are given a dataset (Mall_Customers.csv) that contains the information of customers. The dataset shows their gender, age, annual income, and spending score which is based upon how much they have spent. Our goal is to separate the clients into groups based upon their annual income and spending score.

K-Means

The K-Means clustering algorithm has separated the data points into the following clusters.